SENATOR PALMER

Expresses His Views on the Sherman Act.

He Believes the Act Will be Repealed—"Permitting State Banks is Wrong," Says the Senator.

CHICAGO, July 11.—"I favored the repeal of the Sherman act at the last session of congress," said Senator Palmer last night at the Palmer house, "but we were not strong enough in the senate to pass the repeal. I think now, however, the act can be repealed, although the silver men will make a strong fight against it. I assume that at least eight states in the west, with a representation of sixteen in the senate, will be opposed to the repeal of the bill. The silver men of the south will probably be willing to vote for the repeal upon the consideration that the tax on state bank circulation be repealed. Such a repeal would be, in my opinion, a calamity little short of free coinage. Not that the tax is right, for it is not. I believe it is an abuse by the government of its taxing powers. It is considerably like the proposed option tax. I believe that state bank circulation is wrong and the government the great banker, should suppress it directly and not by taxing it. My idea of a remedy for the present condition is the repeal of the Sherman act, the redemption of outstanding circulation and the issue of notes payable in coin at the option of the holder. This talk that the president is using his power of appointments to help him in the effort to repeal the Sherman act will be readily taken up by the silver men, who are anxious for just such timber. I know that if I were president, I would appoint men to office who agree with me on all questions. If Mr. Cleveland has as much sense as I think he has, he will do the same thing."

PENSION QUESTION.

Pennsylvania Grand Army Posts Will Discuss It.

Preparing to Call a Meeting for That Purpose—Hoke Smith May be Severely Criticised.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 11.—In reference to the feeling in the local G. A. R. posts against Secretary Hoke Smith because of the alleged unjust suspension of pensioners, State Commander Thos. G. Sample, in speaking yesterday of the contemplated action, said: "The executive committee is preparing to issue a call to all the grand army posts in western Pennsylvania to attend a meeting at which this matter will be thoroughly discussed. This meeting will be secret and will be held in about two weeks in Pittsburg or Allegheny. We will formulate our action and present it as the expression of the grand army posts of Western Pennsylvania at the national encampment to be held in Indianapolis the first week in September. Then the feeling of the grand army as an organization will be expressed in not unmeasured terms and the people of this country will know where we stand. Until this is done no post has any right to take action in the matter."

INTO A RECEIVERS HANDS.

Failure of the North Galveston Land and Improvement Company.

GALVESTON, Tex., July 11.—The North Galveston Land and Improvement association went into the hands of a receiver yesterday. The liabilities are estimated at $500,000, of which $160,000 is due contractors and various other parties. The assets are lands, town sites and improvements at North Galveston, which has a population of about 3,000 and several small factories. No estimate is placed on its value. The court appointed Mr. R. A. Reese as receiver, and his bond was fixed at $200,000. The most distressing feature of the assignment is the impecunious condition of the employes. They have received no wages for several months and are in absolute want. They and others came to North Galveston under the most flattering inducements. It is believed that the first effort of the receiver will be to provide means for their relief. It is thought that by proper management and a let up in the stringency of the money market, the North Galveston company will be able to settle its indebtedness in full.

REMARKABLE RECORD.

One Man Distributes 120,000 Copies of the Bible.

NEW YORK, July 11.—The seventy-seventh annual report of the American Bible society, the first numbers of which came from the press yesterday, tells of the work that body has accomplished during the past year. Receipts were $578,930.76, and expenditures, $56,537.01. The sum of $155,234.32 was appropriated for the foreign department during the present year. Record is made of the death of Deacon William G. Brown, of New Hampshire, perhaps the most famous Bible distributor in the world. He died at the age of seventy-six years, and had been engaged in the work of distributing Bibles since 1849. During that period he had distributed more that 120,000 copies of the Scriptures.

FIRE DAMP EXPLODES.

All the Miners, Excepting One, Escape Injury.

CUMBERLAND, Md., July 11.—An explosion of fire damp took place yesterday in mine No. 1, of the West Virginia Central Railroad property. Ninety miners were at work in the various drifts at the time. The mine was soon filled with flames and smoke. The men made a wild dash for the shaft and all succeeded in escaping but one, who is imprisoned in an isolated drift and is supposed to have been burned to death.

MAY HAVE ANOTHER!

Arrest of the Man Who Murdered the Ray Sisters.

Another Lynching in Prospect—The Mob Contend, However, that They Hung the Right Man.

CAIRO, Ill., July 11.—News was received here last night that a colored man had been arrested at Milan, Tenn., who is found to have been an accomplice of Miller, who was lynched at Bardwell, Ky., last Friday. It is said he is the one that actually committed the murder of the Ray sisters. The sheriff of Bardwell, Ky., has been notified, and if he proves to be the man it is probable another lynching is in prospect. A passenger conductor on the Illinois Central, who brings the news of the arrest, says the man fought desperately, but when finally overpowered admitted that he murdered the girls and that Miller knew it and refused to divulge it.

BARDWELL, Ky., July 11.—A number of the most active workers in the capture and lynching of S. J. Miller got together yesterday and prepared a statement which will be given to the public today. It will establish the guilt of Miller beyond all question. Beginning with the trail at the place of the murder, it was kept up to the Dupayster field, several miles away, where a negro was shot at the afternoon of the murder. The same trail was found on the other side of the river. Gordon, the fisherman who rowed the negro over the river, knowing that upon his word the man could live or die, swore positively he was the man. Mrs. Bradley saw a man pass her house, which is on the trail followed the morning of the murder. She saw the man here and says he is the same man she saw pass her house. There is much more evidence against Miller and every one is satisfied that the right man was hanged.

PADUCAH, Ky., July 11.—Mayor D. A. Yeiser, of this city, received a telegram late yesterday afternoon from Slaughter Linthicum, the mayor of Bardwell, asking for the loan of one hundred Winchester rifles and 240 rounds of ammunition. He stated that their little city was threatened with serious trouble, the negro population having risen up in indignation over the hanging and burning of S. J. Miller there Friday. A large crowd of people from this city have gone to the scene.

PROBABLY MURDER.

Unknown Man Found in a Wheat Field.

Two Bullet Holes in His Head and the Absence of Clothing Indicate Robbery and Murder.

LEBANON, Pa., July 11.—What may prove to be a sensational murder was brought to light yesterday afternoon by the finding of the body of an unknown man in the wheat field on the farm of Peter Engle, in Londonderry township. Coroner Reager, of this city, viewed the corpse and found that the man had been shot twice in the head and also stabbed in two places. The body was that of an apparently well bred man of about thirty-five years, clean shaven. It had been dragged about one hundred feet into the field and had on only a shirt and a pair of pantloons. The victim is supposed to be a drummer who, after being waylaid on the road and robbed, was murdered and the body hastily concealed in the field. There is no clue to the murderer.

A COMET SIGHTED.

It Appears West of the Polar Star and Near the Top of the Great Bear.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 11.—A comet was visible in the northern sky last night, some degrees below and three or four degrees to the west of the Polar star and near the top of the great bear. The comet was seen just before 11 o'clock. The course is downward and it is about fifteen degrees above the horizon. The tail is but a few degrees in length, although the nucleus is very bright.

DR. M'GLYNN

NEW YORK, July 11.—The Herald this morning publishes an interview with Dr. McGlynn in which the latter says he will appear next month at the world's fair and during the world's congress of religions he will deliver an address on the Catholic church's attitude on economy questions.

He is Wanted in Findlay for Murdering a Girl.

FIGHT AT ROBY

Between Smith and Griffin for the Feather-Weight Honors.

Griffin is Knocked Out in the Fourth Round and Remains Unconscious for Ten Minutes.

ROBY, Ind., July 11.—The feather-weight championship battle between Solly Smith, of California, and Johnny Griffin, of Braintree, Mich., took place at the Columbian Athletic club last night before a crowd of 7,000 people for a purse of $6,000 and the featherweight championship of the world. George Dixon, the 120 pound champion of the world, with his manager, Thomas O'Rourke, before the contest challenged the winner to a fight to a finish for a purse and side wager of from $5,000 to $10,000 each. James J. Corbett, Denver Ed Smith, and other prominent sports were present. When Corbett walked to the box the entire crowd stood up and yelled. There were calls for a speech, but he only responded by lifting his hat. President O'Mally announced that the club will donate $250 for the relief of the Chicago firemen. Corbett then jumped into the ring and said: "I have come to announce that I am anxious to meet Peter Jackson. The reason I speak is because his manager, Parson Davies, is here tonight. I have a check for $10,000 to fight Jackson at any time."

Parson Davies responded: "Gentlemen, Corbett has just announced that Jackson followed him all over the country. I deny this. I have had $2,500 posted with the New York Clipper for a year or more. He has failed to cover it."

Corbett then said Davies should name the time and post the money.

"No, you name the time," said the parson.

It was agreed to fight some time in November, and each posted $1,000 with President O'Malley. Barry knocked Shea out in four rounds.

Johnny Griffin and Solly Smith appeared in the best condition. Griffin was looked after by Dan Creedo, William Crowley, Nat Howes, with Jimmy Carroll and B. H. Benton, time keeper. Smith's seconds were Sam Fitzpatrick, Seward Smith, Joe Choynski, with Wyatt Erp, time keeper.

Round 1.—Sparred cautiously for opening. After a clinch Griffin lands on Solly's cheek. Solly uppercuts Griffin at the ropes.

Round 2.—Smith is the aggressor; chases Griffin, lands on his stomach and neck and received two in return. Hot fighting followed.

Round 3.—Smith rushed Griffin. The latter catches Sol on the neck. Both land heavily on the stomach. Griffin corners Sol, and the latter smashes him in the left eye. Solly lands on Griffin's neck, and staggers him. He uppercuts him and lands on the stomach, knocking Sol to the ropes. Sol landed a blow that nearly upset John.

Round 4.—Both came up smiling; Griffin landed two on Sol's neck which made him grunt. Sol sent one on the stomach. Sol got a blow on the neck which sent him reeling. He staggered all around the ring, but Griffin fails to follow his advantage. Sol appeared very groggy, but suddenly rousing, he caught Griffin a terrible blow on the point of the jaw, knocking him down and out. It was very unexpected. Griffin remained unconscious for ten minutes.

The fight was the hottest ever fought between feather-weights. Smith did most of the leading, and although his blows were wild, he evidently knew his men.

BUTCHERS HIS WIFE.

Demented Frank Bayes Then Blows Out His Own Brains.

WAUSEON, Ohio, July 11.—The most horrible murder and suicide of Fulton county was committed at the home of Frank Bayes, a well known young farmer living about four miles southwest of this place, yesterday, the victims of the deed being the husband, Frank Bayes, and his young and pretty wife.

The first alarm was given by their little four year-old daughter, who barely escaped the murderous father's hand. She ran to a neighboring house, exclaiming: "Come quick; papa is cutting mamma all to pieces." A neighbor arrived just in time to see the murderer blow his brains out. Mrs. Bayes was dead when found. Her throat had been cut from ear to ear, her arms and face jabbed full of holes and the half of her right leg nearly severed from her body. Insanity is the supposed cause of the act, as it is known to run in the family, and the murderer himself has been troubled with it before.

DESPERATE BATTLE

Fought Between Yaquis and Mexican Cavalry.

HERMOSILLO, Mexico, July 11.—A courier arrived here today from the Yaquis Indian country, bringing official information of a desperate battle between Yaquiss and a troop of Mexican cavalry, commanded by Lieut. Benito Rocha, one of the bravest officers of the army. In the early part of the fight Lieutenant Rocha was shot and killed. The force of Indians out numbered the soldiers two to one, and the latter were compelled to retreat. The fight took place yesterday in a remote section of the Sierra Madre mountains, this state. No report has been received here as to the number killed and wounded on either side.

Miss Celia Racine, of Washington township, was in the city yesterday to be treated for serious eye trouble. Dr. Seaton attended.

SEVENTEEN DEAD.

Such is the Result of the World's Fair Fire.

Heartrending Scenes About the Mass of Ruins as the Remains Are Taken Out.

CHICAGO, July 11.—It was about 5 o'clock last evening when the work of rescuing the bodies of the dead from the smoldering wreck of the cold storage warehouse fire in the world's fair grounds was begun and by midnight the remains of seven dead men had been taken out and placed on as many slabs in the morgue.

Only one body has been positively identified, that of Wm. Dening, although two firemen who called thought they saw in one heap of charred remains a resemblance to their comrade, M. McQuado, driver of engine No. 3. Four of the bodies bore little likeness to dead humanity. One gummy sack, when opened, showed a damp mass of charred matter. Close inspection revealed black and fleshless bones and only by these were firemen enabled to tell that they had found what was left of a man.

During the evening many women called—wives, mothers and sisters of firemen. They were told that it was useless to go below and gaze upon the bodies, as there was no hope of identifying the dead. Their earnest pleadings were in vain, except in a few instances, but every time those who had hoped to relieve their uncertainty by a visit at the morgue, left only sickened by what they had witnessed.

Soon after daybreak this morning a company of firemen and truck No. 25, under command of Marshal King, Twelfth battalion, went to work with ropes, picks and other appliances on the black mass of wooden wreckage from the cold storage warehouse to clear it away in their search for perished comrades. They knew where the remnants of bodies were to be found for they had seen the victims leap from the north side of the tower nearly 100 feet through a lake of roaring flames.

At 8.30 o'clock the workers, begrimmed and half dead with fatigue, came upon the cinder-like trunks of four human beings. There was not enough left to ascertain if the bodies were those of the firemen, guards or workmen employed in the building. The trunks were found close together on the first floor at the north end, showing that the victims had fallen partly or wholly through the roof after leaping from the tower of death and had been roasted like rats in the seething furnace when the whole roof followed the tower into the pit of fire.

The blackened pieces of bone and flesh were taken in the ambulances to the Emergency hospital until the dead wagon came to take them to the Hyde Park morgue. The firemen listlessly returned to their labors and pulled down all the standing wall on the north side.

At the Emergency hospital there were heart rending scenes this morning. Wives, mothers and sisters of those who had gone down in the sea of flames to enquire if there was not some mistake; if any of the missing have been heard from alive, and some who had evidently lost all hope even asked if the charred bodies had been identified so that they could go away and grieve with the poor consolation that the devouring flames had not done their work.

One of the most pitiful cases was that of John A. Smith, driver of engine company No. 2, stationed at the service building. His mother and sister came with tears of grief to learn if he was among the dead, as published this morning. His comrades, the guards and the hospital doctors knew that the body of Smith was beyond identification even, but they had not the heart to tell the woman the worst. He was missing, that was all. If the women had asked Harry D. Williams, a pipe man from engine company No. 2, they could have been told the sickening story of poor Smith's fate. Williams was the last man to leave the roof alive and the falling tower of flaming wood alone forced him from his work of pulling the fallen and burned men from the holes which they had made in the light wood tar and gravel roof on striking. Williams recognized the body of Smith when it dropped infront of him and he rushed to extricate it from the four foot hole made in the roof. He took hold of both arms and pulled him out toward the edge of the roof and as he did so the flesh peeled off both arms, the brave fireman's head fell back and his eyes were fixed. Williams thinks his comrade was dead then but they dragged the body through fire and falling embers to the edge of the roof only to discover that the rope had been burned away from the extension ladder and with a last look at the burned features, Williams released his hold, giving back to the flames their prey and rushed for the ladder just in time to escape from going down in the flaming pit with the others who lay dead and half cremated under the fallen floor. Williams could only say this morning that he pulled out half a dozen men from the holes they made between the flimsy roof and the joists, but could not tell in those few awful moments with flames in front of him, where the bodies were dropping or who these victims were. None of these he pulled from under the roof, where they were imbedded as far as the shoulders in a vice like trap, escaped alive.

The rolls were called in the different fire engine houses at 7 o'clock this morning. It was ascertained that eleven firemen were missing and they were given up as dead by their comrade. The lost are as follows:

James Garvey, captain of company No. 1.

John A. Smith, of Springfield, Ills., driver of engine company No. 2.

Paul Schroeder, truckman of company No. 8.

Phil Breen, truckman of chemical engine No. 11.

John H. Renan, of engine company No. 1.

Charles P. Purvis, truckman of company No. 7.

John Cahill, truckman of company No. 8.

In addition to these are the unfortunates who died at the hospital last night. They are:

James Fitzpatrick, assistant chief of battalion, and captain of company No. 2.

William Denning, pipeman of company No. 1.

John McBride, driver of engine, company No. 8.

The bodies of six persons were recovered last night, and four more this morning. All were horribly burned, so that it was impossible to even attempt identification. Four Columbian guards are still missing, and it is thought their bodies are underneath the mass of debris.

This makes the total fatalities seventeen, as far as known, although the full extent of the death dealt out may never be ascertained.

Louis J. Frank, fireman of engine company No. 2, lies in the Emergency hospital in a critical condition, and the doctors fear he may die. With him are also S. E. Ward Nordrum, another fireman from the same company; Frank N. Bierbeburg and W. H. Mahoney, firemen of engine company No. 1. They are not in danger of dying from their injuries.

These four are at the Emergency hospital today. Capt. Thos. Barry, of truck No. 8, was taken to Mercy hospital, and the others to St. Luke's hospital. All will recover. Should Fireman Frank succumb to his burns, Engine company No. 2, stationed at the service building, will lose three of its men, Captain Fitzpatrick and John A. Smith being already on the death list.

SAYS IT IS DAILEY

Who will Walk off with the Supreme Judgeship.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 11.—The Journal says this morning that it has information that Governor Matthews will return home from Jeffersonville today, and tomorrow he will give out his appointment to fill the vacancy caused on the supreme bench of the state by the resignation of Judge Olds. The appointee will be Judge Joseph S. Dailey, of Bluffton, and he will at once assume the duties of his office. Judge Dailey was sent for by the governor and met him here Saturday. The message was sent to Judge Dailey asking him to come, and he at once adjourned court, though in the middle of an important case, and made his arrangements to come.

It is thought that Edward S. Vaughn, of Bluffton, will be selected to fill the vacancy made by Judge Dailey's appointment.

THREE TIMES BURNED.

A Village That Has Been Very Unfortunate.

ST. JOHN, N. B., July 11.—For the third time within a few years the village of Fairville, a suburb of this place, was again yesterday afternoon almost destroyed by fire. The burned district covers a large part of the section that was burned a year ago, which has been rebuilt, together with that part of the village which escaped destruction at that time. Eighty families are homeless. Many handsome new residences were destroyed, and the loss will reach well into the thousands of dollars.

Harry Hanna was the attorney for the plaintiff.

LABORERS STRIKE.

Workmen on the Ninth Ward Sewer Go Out.

They Say the Work is Dangerous and Ask a Raise From $1.50 to $2.00 Per Day.

About 10 o'clock this morning some twenty five or thirty men employed in the construction of the new Ninth ward sewer, in Bloomingdale, laid down their tools and struck for an advance of from $1.50 per day to $2.00. The men made no demonstration, but quietly marched down Calhoun street to the office of Wilding & Dellheimer, where they stated their grievance and were told by the contractors that the advance could not be granted. The men were therefore paid off and left the office. Some of the men were inclined to be talkative, and stated they would see to it that no one worked in the sewer for less than $2.00 per day. The men say the work is very dangerous, owing to the loose condition of the soil. Last night Sol. Milligan, an employe, was struck in the head by a bucket, which fell from above, and other minor accidents have occurred which have no doubt had something to do with making the men uneasy.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Judge Jenkins, in the United States circuit court today handed down a decision in the suit brought by Wanamaker & Brown to restrain the World's Columbian exposition directors from opening the fair gates on Sunday. MUTINOUS CANNIBALS.

The Bold Australian Boomerang Throwers Get Fussy.

Billy Was Drunk and His Wife, Left Handed Jennie, Sat Down on Him—Police Called.

The wild Australian boomerang throwers were "jagged," yesterday afternoon at Lakeside park and were, in consequence, very quarrelsome. They threw boomerangs in a very wild and reckless manner and made the air fairly hum. The duties of the Princess Togara, otherwise known as "Left Handed Jennie," is to gather up the stray boomerangs as they fall about the grounds after their bird like flights. Her husband, Billy, the Bold Boomerang Bowler," was also intoxicated and threw his crooked sticks in a very bad manner. To gather up the stray boomerangs was no easy task and "Left Handed Jennie" made a vigorous "kick." Billy kept on throwing boomerangs in his bold Bushman like manner. Jenny kept on kicking. Finally Billy hauled off and threw a boomerang at Jenny's head. The thrower's arm was somewhat unsteady and the missle flew wide of the mark. However, it circled around and flew into the ampitheater, where it came near taking an ear off Willis Hattersley. The cannibals then began to act as though they sniffed the odor of fresh cooked missionary, but it was only Officer McCrory, who had been sent for. The disturbance was quelled by the manager and all went well until the performance was over and the blacks were in the dressing room. Here Left Handed Jennie made an attack upon her husband, throwing him down and sitting upon him. She also bit a good sized hole in his shoulder.

These Australians often get very troublesome and the only way their manager can conquer them is to take the blacks into a room and compel them to stand up before him and fight after the manner of Corbett and Sullivan. After the blacks have been knocked out they are docile for two or three weeks, when they again get quarrelsome and the knocking out process has to be repeated.

BIG BUTCHER KNIFE.

Herman Nau Threatened to Cut His Wife's Throat.

He is Sent to Jail for Fifteen Days—Too Much Mother-in-Law—Wife Beater Fined.

Herman Nau is a queer looking little German laborer who has a low forehead and a sharp nose. He does not appear overly intelligent and acts as though he was slightly "off." He and his mother-in-law have quarreled and the wife was also involved. Herman is Mrs. Nau's second husband and does not like his eleven-year-old stepson to be around the Thomas street home. The mother-in law is a nervy little old woman whose favorite weapon is an umbrella. Last night Herman was drunk and quarrelsome.

Trouble began over the step son, and Herman armed himself with a butcher knife and his wife with the milk pitcher. The engagement which followed was brief and bloodless, but Mrs. Nau was badly scared, as her husband had the knife at her throat and threatened to decapitate her. She ran screaming to the neighbors and in a few minutes half of Frenchtown had turned out to see the riot. Officer Pelgin happened along and found Nau out on the back steps of his residence quietly smoking his pipe. He bustled him off to the station and this morning all parties concerned, were up before his honor. Nau was charged with assault. Marshal Franke officiated as interpreter and rehearsed the harrowing tale for the benefit of the court. During the examination the little spry mother-in-law sprang up and rushing over to the prisoner, gave him a good tongue lashing in German. Nau was fined $5 and costs, apparently much to the satisfaction of his spouse. The prisoner had no money, but wanted to sell the family cow to pay the fine and costs. He was marched off to jail before he succeeded in striking a bargain.

STRUCK HIS WIFE.

Frank Sturgis, whose right name is Carrol, was up before the mayor for assaulting his wife. Last night the prisoner was drunk and treated his frail-looking wife in a shameful manner on the streets. Officer Knoch had quite a tussel with the fellow when he made the arrest. Carrol fought and had to be clubbed. He had nothing to say to the charge and was fined $5 and costs, which he paid and drove off with his wife, who was in waiting for him at the station house door with a buggy.

BROKE HER NOSE.

Serious Accident Happens to Mrs. Mary Woodworth.

Over One Hundred Stitches Taken in the Body of Farmer John Pierce—Other Casualties.

Mrs. Mary Woodworth, an aged widow, living at 26 Melita street, met with a serious accident this morning about 7 o'clock. While engaged in her household duties, she accidently fell down a steep flight of stairs, striking on her head. Mrs. Woodworth is nearly seventy years of age and was badly hurt. Her nose was broken and she was badly bruised about the head and shoulders. Dr. Meyers attended. Owing to the age of the injured lady the accident is rendered all the more serious.

Dr. Kessler returned from the country yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock having spent almost the entire day in sewing up cuts in the body of John Pierce. The injured farmer was the man mentioned in yesterday's SENTINEL as having been cut to pieces by a self-binding reaper. Dr. Kessler stated to a reporter this morning that Pierce was the worst cut up man he had seen. Pierce was thrown upon the guards and held firmly until the knives literally cut his clothing off. He was then rolled under the binder and crushed. One leg was broken. The doctor was compelled to take over 100 stitches in the wounds. As Pierce was suffering internal hemorrhages last night there is much doubt as to his recovery.

Alexander Thavenet, a switchman residing on Huestis avenue, was caught by the breast and badly squeezed at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon while coupling cars at the Lafayette street crossing. The injured man was taken on the patrol wagon to St. Joseph hospital. He is a married man. The injuries are internal and pretty severe, but it is thought he will recover.

A wagon drawn by four horses and owned by S. F. Bowser & Co., broke down on Broadway near Pritchard street at 9 o'clock this morning. It was laden with members of the Baptist Sunday school, who were bound for High Banks.

This morning Louis Brantiol, of the City Bottling works, badly sprained his ankle. Dr. Carl Schilling attended.

JOHN D. CARTWRIGHT.

Capt. Fred Boltz Writes Concerning His Comrade's Death.

Editor SENTINEL.

Please correct your notice of death of John D. Cartwright. He was not a member of Capt. Scott Swan's company D., Eighty-eighth Indiana infantry.

He was a member of company F., Eighty-eighth Indiana. He resigned in October, 1863, after the battle of Chicamauga, Ga. His mental derangement was directly caused by the strain and excitement of said battle. Capt. Isaac H. Le Fever, of company F., who was killed September 20, 1863, was his brother-in-law. There were four companies in the Eighty-eighth from Allen county instead of one, viz.: Companies C, D, E and F. I am sorry to hear of John's death. He was one of the kindliest and best men I ever knew.

"KID" WILSON

A Former Fort Wayne Boy is a Western Train Robber.

The Warsaw Daily Times has the following: "Readers of this paper have no doubt noticed in the regular telegraphic dispatches of the western press the account of the arrest of Henry Starr and "Kid" Wilson for train robbery in Colorado. It is generally understood here that "Kid" Wilson, one of the desperadoes, is the son of Taylor Wilson, formerly of this place; and it may be true, for the boy had all the elements in his make-up for just such a character. His parents lived in Warsaw for some time." Taylor Wilson was for a year or so a solicitor on the Fort Wayne Gazette, when Keator and Holman were the proprietors, and with his family resided in this city.

The Marion Chronicle intimates that the failure of the Fairmount bank was due to the anxiety of the officers to boom the town. He said he had neglected it during his lifetime, and wanted his dead body baptized. A few days ago he died, and on the day of the funeral, at Hixon's Grove, Rev. W. J. Freeman immersed the corpse in the presence of a large crowd of people. The body was then put back into the coffin and laid in the graveyard.

FROM FAR OFF SAMOA.

MANNERS AND CUSTOMS OF THE SAMOANS.

Their Exhibit at the World's Fair Is Full of Interest for Students of History—Pictures of Natives of Different Classes.

[World's Fair Correspondence.]

FULL BLOODED representatives of Samoa are very interesting people. Of all of the South Sea Islanders, the Samoans are the most ancient on Midway Plaisance. Other tribes are perhaps older as individuals or as a tribe, but these people carry their story of a tribe nearly 1,200 years. The legends of this people are all kept by one family. There is no written record. The history is handed down from father to son by word of mouth. The historians, as they are called, are held in great respect by the people, and the boy is always trained by his father for the particular career in life before him.

H. J. Moores, who has charge of the villagers here, has lived in the Samoan islands for many years and has made a particular study of the people and their ways. Being a personal friend of Mataafa, he has had an excellent opportunity to study the folk lore of the people.

"The accuracy of the historians of the Samoans is unimpeachable," said he. "During my many years' residence among them I have looked into the matter in a most careful way and find that the stories that they tell never vary. These people formerly lived in Sumatra. The exact time they left there is not known with any degree of accuracy, but it was before the Mohammedan religion reached the peninsula. The best calculation possible makes this about 1,200 years ago.

The legend which tells of their leaving is peculiar. It seems that two men, whom the Samoans call demigods or witches, offended the people by killing a large number by some spell. They were obliged to flee and left the island. An expedition of men and women in sixteen boats started out to find them. The course taken was to the east and they finally landed on one of the Philippine Islands, where they heard a trace of the fugitives, obtained a stock of food and water and started out again. Encountering the westward winds, they finally came to Hawaii, which they thought to be deserted. They landed, and after two weeks they found natives there. Fearing that they were hostile, the Samoans put logs about the boats and made a sort of fortification out of it. This operation they called "Pulu," which means safety, and thus equipped they sailed down to a village to do battle. To their surprise, they found the natives friendly, and they landed and called the place Honolulu, which means safety harbor. They remained with the Hawaiians for some weeks, and, in company with a native chief named Leanai Tualaga, they started out again to find the fugitives and kill them. The first landing was at Tahaiti, and from there they went to Rorotonga, thence westward to Samoa. They discovered the island of Tutuila, and afterward Upolu.

At all of these places they found traces of the runaways and at the last named place they found that the two men had been turned into pillars of stone, and the people point out the stones to this day. The island was named after two of the Kings, Ou and Pulu. It was the most fertile of the group. They finally settled there and are there to-day.

Since they left Sumatra fifty-two Kings or Queens have ruled over them. Until the recent trouble in Samoa the ruling monarch has always been the direct descendant of the early Kings. The split in the royal house came about in a peculiar way. The ruling monarch at the time was a Queen who was loved and who had a son who was a great favorite. He was a manly sort of a fellow and everybody liked him. Hunting and taming pigeons was his favorite amusement. At the time the trouble started he was on a hunting trip near the west end of the island, while his mother lived at Lafaga, about sixty miles away. The Queen fell ill and sent for her son to make all haste and join her. But the son delayed. He made the journey by easy stages, making frequent excursions from the main road to hunt pigeons and even after he did arrive at his mother's village he did not go at once to her house, but took his tame pigeons out of their cages and was showing them to the villagers. This angered his mother and she sent for her sister's son and made him her successor and disinherited her son. The descendants of the Mining Borax.

Nearly all the borax deposits heretofore discovered have been found in the form of incrustations on the surface of marshlands, of nodules buried beneath the surface or of crystals embedded in the mud at the bottom of shallow lakes. In a few instances these deposits are found interstratified with layers of earth and rock, the entire formation being in a horizontal position, as seen at several points in Death Valley. But only in the Calico district, San Bernardino County, does one of these boracic deposits occur in the form of a regular vein so uptilted that it requires to be exploited after the manner of a quartz or other ore-bearing lode.

This deposit, the property of the Pacific Coast Borax Company, is located on the southeasterly slope of the Calico Mountains, or rather on a northerly spur of that range. This lode, which outcrops at intervals for nearly three miles, has an east and west course and a southerly inclination. The slate walls are inclosed in sandstone, superimposed upon which is a brecciated rock, evidently of volcanic origin. The crude material here consists of that variety of the borate of lime known as Colemanite. It is of a vitreous adamantine luster and exceedingly rich in anhydrous boracic acid. The contents of the fissure are six feet thick, and at a depth of over 200 feet hold this proportion, nearly pure mineral. The deposit has been opened by several shafts standing 100 feet apart, these being connected by drafts and levels. The material being easily broken down, but a small working force is required in the mine. All that is abnormal about this deposit of borax is easily accounted for. Originally, it was, no doubt, deposited at the bottom of a lake, where, later on, great floods brought down a quantity of sediment which covered it up. In course of time this sediment having been converted into rock, the whole was then lifted up by some convulsion of nature and left standing at its present angle, this movement having been most likely of a seismic character. In the early history of the borax industry the works put up for the manufacture of this salt were of a very rude and primitive style. Owing to the great cost of lumber, this article had to be economized to the utmost, the crystalizing vats and other portions of the plant being left uncovered. But in the hot and desiccated atmosphere that for two-thirds of the year prevails in that region, this was no detriment so long as the workmen could be protected in part, at least, from the rays of the sun, which here strike down with a killing heat the whole day long.

BARBARA'S MISTAKE.

She came down the stairs of the Ellsmore high school with a weary look on her face, although she chatted brightly with the two "pan-tors" who were with her. The worst and principal in a place boasting of such a large and active high school as Ellsmore could not find her work very easy, and Barbara Bennett often saw dark shadows under her gray eyes when she looked in her glass at night.

This evening she dropped a few steps behind her two admirers, for all Barbara's pupils were her admirers, leaving them happy in their girlish confidences. A pretty, pensive girlish figure she was, just of that smallness which a man of six feet likes in a woman, her gold-brown hair curled prettily over the edge of her jaunty toque, her cheeks like peachblooms, her lips curving into a smile at her own thoughts.

A low-seated, glittering phaeton swept by them, and Barbara was glad that her keen-eyed companions were ahead, so warmly did she feel her face flush at sight of the gentleman who held the reins. But who was his companion, that slender, black-clad figure, a girl with pale face and great, sad, dark eyes?

It was only a week ago that he had left home, as he said, on business, and had not his last words to her, fraught with all the meaning that his deep voice could carry, been ringing in her ears ever since?

The girls ahead unconsciously raised their voices. "He came home with her this morning," said one; "so our Hannah said at noon, as lover-like as you please. They say that he has been engaged to some one for a long time."

"That's her, then," answered her companion, with the disregard for such a trifling thing as grammar evidenced often by high school pupils, "for he told brother Frank the other day that he hoped to be married before another year."

"I'm glad," continued the first, "for my heart has been in my throat all year for fear he would carry away Miss Bennett, and that would be—"

Remembering the proximity of the lady in question their voices dropped and, calling good-night, they turned the next corner and left her.

When she came into the warm air several minutes before Barbara had drawn a long breath of delight at the perfection of such a winter as comes only to Kansas.

Warm almost as spring, the skies blue and cloudless save for fire-like flakes of cloud which lay in the west, where the sun was sinking, throwing his long, slanting rays of gold over the world.

The gold was turned to lead. The beauty was gone. Harry Randall had seemed a god to her. The thought of his brown eyes, with their direct glance, always gave her courage. Of late, by every act and word, he had seemed to give himself to her, and now she had seen him bending over this stranger with such solicitude that even the school children talked of it.

And he intended to marry her before another year! What could it mean?

When Harry Randall's uncle, Robert Paxton, one of the wealthiest men in Ellsmore, had failed two years before, dying soon after from the shock, his wife, left only with her handsome home, had turned it into a boarding-house, and Harry remained still an inmate.

Upon the evening in question, she slowly mounted to her room, where good-natured Maggie, the housemaid, was lighting a fire. She imparted her news:

"Mr. Randle's back, Miss Barb'ry, an' he brought a young lady with him. She put her arms 'round Mis' Paxton's neck an' cried an' cried, and then Mr. Randle took her arm an' helped her upstairs. Her name's Miss Palmer, but I don't know who she is unless she b'longs to Mr. Randle, an' that duz look reasonable."

When Barbara entered the lower hall at supper time, she saw Harry emerging from the parlor. He had evidently been watching for her, for he brushed the portiere hastily aside and strode quickly toward her.

Had she not avoided looking directly at him, it is doubtful if Barbara would have so coldly cut short his murmured words of greeting, or so willfully refused to see his outstretched hand.

Her stately manner seemed to take all the gladness out of the young man's face, and he turned and passed into the dining-room ahead of her.

Barbara looked up and down the length of the attractive table, surrounded by pleasant faces (for Mrs. Paxton had none but the pleasantest people in her house) but Miss Palmer was not present.

Her survey stopped at the face opposite—Harry—regarding her seriously. She could see beneath his heavy mustache that he was biting his lip nervously. She colored hotly, dropped her gaze and did not look up again.

She encountered Mrs. Paxton on the stair a little later.

"My dear," said the good lady, "my niece, Gertrude Palmer, has come to stay with me. The poor girl has suffered a sad bereavement, and I sent for her because she should not stay alone in the house where her father lately died. I want you to do what you can to bring her out of her melancholy condition. She will sleep in the third story because it is quieter there, and will use my own sitting-room across the hall from your room. You must help us in this."

Barbara consented and in due time was introduced to the new arrival. So successful was the girl that Barbara forgot the rivalry between them, or rather put it out of her mind. Much of her spare time during the last week was spent in Miss Palmer's sitting-room, but the latter never mentioned Harry's name nor her own bereavement. That young man appeared unremitting in his attention to her and in his efforts to make peace with Barbara, but was met in the one case by a weary indifference, and in the other by a cold and studied avoidance.

One evening, the last of the week, going upstairs after dark, Barbara stopped at the door of the sitting-room. The door was ajar and she pushed it open softly. There were no lights, but through the dusk Barbara saw and heard that which ... her to the floor.

In her easy chair at the window sat Gertrude, her face covered with her hands. Leaning over the high back of the chair stood a figure which she knew well—knew also every inflection of the voice that rose earnestly above the girl's low sobbing.

"Don't say that, Gertrude, don't say that. Even so great a grief as yours cannot entirely kill the heart. Think of your friends; you are dear to them. Why Gertrude," and the voice sank lower, and Barbara could see him softly stroking the dark head, "I have loved you ever since we played together as little children, and our good aunt looks on you as her daughter, and you—"

Thought of the shameful thing that she was doing surged over Barbara, unchaining her senses, and she fled, quivering with grief and mortification to her room, pressing two cold hands to her burning cheeks.

The next two days being Saturday and Sunday, Barbara was free to remain in her room, nursing her aching head.

On Monday she sat listlessly by her front window waiting for the breakfast bell, when a carriage drove up and stopped, and a young man leaped out and, dashing up to the door, rang the bell violently. She had barely time to notice he was blonde, haggard and travel-stained. It passed out of her mind, and an extra commotion below did not attract her attention.

A few moments later the bell rang, and the girl opened her door to go downstairs. Coming up were two men, Harry Randall and the stranger, a man pale and thin, with blue eyes almost black with excitement. Harry rapped at the sitting-room door opposite, and flung it open. Gertrude stood within, her face showing chalk-white against her black gown. The stranger started forward, open-armed, and, in response to his hoarse, hushed cry of "Gertrude! Gertrude!" she rushed to him and the door swung shut.

Harry turned toward the girl beside him and took possession of her hands in a forcible manner.

"There," he declared, "I have been instrumental in settling the happiness of one couple, and after I have one more affair of the kind off my mind, I will be the happiest man alive. Barbara, why have you treated me so?"

The pink and white fluctuated in the girl's face as she faltered, "I thought that you and Miss Palmer—I thought—Mrs. Paxton said that her father had just died and—and the other day—I heard you tell her that you had loved her all your life, and—"

Here her voice broke down utterly, and, after striving vainly to free her hands, she was forced to hide her eyes on the manly shoulder toward which she was drawn.

"Why, my dear little girl," and the voice was certainly earnest enough to please anyone, "is this the trouble that has come between us? Didn't you know that Gertrude was mourning for her lover, Gerald Northrup, whom we thought dead, but who has so happily returned? He went South two months ago, and was reported as having perished in a burning hotel. Gertrude was alone, her father having lately died, and I went to bring her here to aunt. It turns out that Gerald, instead of dying, was in Southwestern Texas at the time of the fire, and was taken sick, so he was not heard from for several weeks."

"Yes, I do love Gertrude, but not as I love you. Tell me, dear, what you thought when you heard me say that to her."

"I thought that she could not love you as I could; that if you came to me with such words, I would hear them above any sorrow."

A most joyous affair was the double wedding at the Paxton residence in the early spring, at which time Gertrude Palmer and Barbara Bennett became members of the rising young law firm of Randall & Northrop.

You Must be Mistaken

if you think you've used Pearline and have any fault to find with it. It must have been something else. That sometimes happens. Because Pearline is so well known and so popular, it has become a household name. People say "Pearline" when they mean anything that may claim to help in washing. Perhaps you haven't noticed—and that's just where the trouble is. If you've been using the worthless or dangerous imitations, no wonder you're out of patience. But don't make Pearline suffer for it. Don't give up the real, because you are disgusted with the poor.

PITCHER HAWLEY.

The Clever Young Twirler of the St. Louis Browns.

Emerson P. Hawley, one of the pitchers of the St. Louis club of the National league and American Association, was born Dec. ..., 1872, at Beaver Dam, Wis., says the New York Clipper. He had a twin brother, and at an early age the two began to play ball, being connected with amateur teams as pitcher and catcher. It is said that when the twins were small the nurse tied blue and pink ribbons on them respectively, in order to distinguish one from the other. This resemblance continued to strangers up to the hour of "Blue's" death of pneumonia in June, 1891, and it was a puzzle to decide which was the catcher and which was the pitcher when they were not in their positions on the field. In 1890 and 1891 the boys played with several amateur teams of Wisconsin, where they were known as "Pink" and "Blue," the "pony pitcher and catcher." In March,

E. P. HAWLEY.

1892, Hawley went South with the Chicago team on their practice tour, and while there he was engaged by the professional club representing Fort Smith, Ark. His effective pitching helped the Fort Smith team to defeat the Van Buren nine Aug. 12, 1892, in the deciding game of a series for an announced "purse of $1,000 and the championship of Arkansas." In one game of this series he was credited with striking out no fewer than twenty-two men, and in another game he made four hits, including a home run, a triple and a double bagger. The St. Louis management then secured his services and he finished the season with that club, pitching in seventeen championship games, his best work being against the Bostons and Cincinnatis, each of which he held down to three scattering hits. During the present season Hawley has shown up in good form with the St. Louis team, retiring the Cincinnatis and Chicagos each with two scattering singles. He has remarkable speed, and with better control of the ball promises to be one of the most effective of professional pitchers. Hawley is a good batter, his most noteworthy feat in that respect being in an exhibition game played April 17, 1893, at St. Louis, he then making five successive safe hits, including two home runs. He is five feet ten inches in height and weighs about one hundred and eighty pounds.

MITCHELL COMING.

The English Pugilist Anxious to Whip Champion Corbett.

In a letter to Daily America Charlie Mitchell, the English champion who is matched to fight James J. Corbett, says he is in good condition with the exception of a bad knee, which causes him to limp. Mitchell says things are very slow in England and he is very anxious to sail for the United States. He will not sail for some weeks, however, because, as he puts it, "I should only be on the rack for Corbett's talk about my making a match for the purpose of advertising and showing. My statement to the contrary precludes any business and I should only be worried were I to come earlier." Regarding the match he writes: "I've received no word regarding my contest with Corbett from your side of the water—no club offer anything. But then it is so far off I guess they think there is plenty of time. I shall be on hand and if I don't win I imagine I shall render a good account of myself."

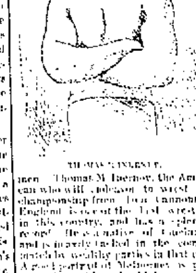

THE RULE CHANGES.

Not Too Much Batting for the Baseball Public.

"There is little justification for the position that putting back the pitcher five feet would lead to too much batting, for the best interest of the game. Certainly New York crowds have thoroughly enjoyed what little increase in the stick work has been shown, but frankly there has not been enough to suit the cranks. The Cincinnati, Cleveland, St. Louis and Pittsburg games were more or less pitchers' battles, and it was supposed that the new rules would obviate this very thing. Of course, everybody rejoiced when Baldwin made the shut-outs against Cincinnati and St. Louis, and when Rusie, by his great pitching, won his games. But the public would have been much better pleased had the New Yorks won with not such a great paucity of base hits attending the victories."

men. Thomas M. Treeney, the American who will endeavor to wrest the championship from Tom Cannon of England, is one of the best wrestlers in this country, and has a splendid record. HON. HUGH M'CULLOCH.

How the Ex-Secretary of Treasury Became a Banker.

In an interview with the reporter of the Huntington Herald, Mr. John Roche an old citizen of that place, has the following to say about Hon. Hugh McCulloch, father of President Charles McCulloch, of the Hamilton bank.

"It was at Fort Wayne that I became acquainted with Hugh McCulloch, the great secretary of the treasury in Lincoln's cabinet. Do you know how McCulloch became a banker? He came from Maine and hung out his shingle as a lawyer. There wasn't much show for a young lawyer in those days, and to help make a living he used to do clerical work for merchants. He would post their books, make out their bills, and became recognized as a competent accountant. When the State bank was opened he was the unanimous choice of the directors for cashier. His diligence and faithfulness in little things was the initial step of an honorable career which made him one of the most prominent of the world's financiers."

Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large Fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle of Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

From present indications the whisky trust will soon be a thing of the past. Somebody made a great deal of money out of the concern, but somebody lost a great deal, too, in their endeavors to defraud the government. They have defrauded themselves. A few months ago it was generally believed that Congress would increase the whisky tax. The distillers commenced to run double time, on the theory that all the spirits manufactured before the taking effect of the new law would be exempt from the increased duty, and the whisky trust would make the difference. But the duty was not raised and the trust is in the "soup."

ABSOLUTELY PURE

COMEDY VS. TRAGEDY.

MAMIE GILROY IN DEFENSE OF THE FORMER.

The Pretty Young Actress Thinks That Tragedy Has Had Its Day. People of the Present Want to See Something to Laugh At.

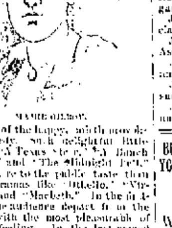

Life, and the world laughs with you. Weep, and you weep alone.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox, the beautiful and gifted poetess, certainly portrayed the feelings of mankind when she gave utterance to this sentiment. There is too much trouble and real life to permit the mirror of the stage to become popular. To this fact I attribute the decline of the Shakespearean drama, and of other plays in which the sorrows, rather than the joys of life, are graphically depicted.

People nowadays go to the theater to be amused rather than to have their spirits depressed. Hence it is that those sparkling little comedies which appeal to the risible qualities of man, rather than the emotional plays, which openly ... , command popular support and enrich the enterprising manager who produces them.

I have noticed particularly that since the deaths of John McCullough, Lawrence Barrett and Edwin Booth—three great examples of all that is noble in histrionic art—the so-called legitimate drama has gradually passed into a state of decadence. In its place has sprung up a new school of acting.

MAMIE GILROY.

It is that of the happy, mirth-provoking comedy. Such delightful little plays as "A Texas Steer," "A Bunch of Keys," and "The Midnight Bell" are far more to the public taste than sombre dramas like "Othello," "Virginius" and "Macbeth." In the former the audience depart from the theater with the most pleasurable of mental feelings. In the last-named the spirits are at a low ebb and the gruesome picture of tragedy enacted is ever present before the mind.

I am glad that it is so. For, although I admit and appreciate the genius of Shakespeare, Bulwer Lytton and Richard Lalor Shiel, I believe in sunshine rather than in gloom, in joy rather than in sorrow, and endeavor to get all the gladness I can in this vale of tears.

Mamie Gilroy

Mrs. Jennie Pyles, of No. 107 Holman street, was up before Mayor Zollinger yesterday, charged with inhumanly treating her little girl. A number of the neighbors were present and testified that Mrs. Pyles had often beaten and abused her little one. The child, the neighbors say, was thrown and pounded in the back, the mother threatening to kill her if she cried. Mayor Zollinger suspended sentence and gave the mother a good talking to.

A CHOLERA REMEDY.

Simple and Warming and Said to Be Certain in Action.

Mr. Lane, an Eastern traveler and Orientalist, recommends the following treatment for cholera.

He says while residing in Cairo in 1843, while cholera was raging there, he was informed that there was an Englishman in a small neighboring village that effected a speedy cure in all cases which he had an opportunity of treating. The number of cases were sixty-two, and many of them were very malignant.

"I subsequently learned that his mode of treatment was practiced with equal success in Spain, Constantinople and India, and was never followed by typhus or typhoid fever, which proved fatal in many cases, when the cholera itself had been subdued by other means. Upon applying to him I received the following directions, which I practiced in a few cases which occurred in my house and elsewhere, with invariable success.

"If the patients have not vomited the poisonous matter which is characteristic of the disease, and which resembles rice water, give a tablespoonful of powdered mustard in a tumbler of cold water as an emetic. After vomiting, whether produced by the disease or the above means, within a few minutes give a wineglassful of brandy, with ten grains of capsicum, powdered, (cayenne pepper), stirred up in it. This generally produces almost immediate relief, and within an hour rest, perspiration and sleep. In a few cases it was found necessary to give half a dose of the brandy and capsicum after half an hour or more. A second half dose was never required, but should it be required it may be given. No other fluid should be drunk before recovering. To accelerate convalescence it has been suggested that fifteen drops of mixture of the spirits of ammonia and sulphuric ether in equal parts may be advantageously given three or four times during the following day. The above quantity of brandy and capsicum is for an adult patient suffering a severe attack; in other cases two-thirds or half that quantity may suffice, as I have proven by experience."
